FACULTY & STAFF

Summer has just ended and you're about to start a 16-credit semester. And the only thing keeping you cool is the sound of bagpipes echoing from the chapel lawn. This year's commencement begins just as they all do. The Drum Corps enters, but not before you all stand and flash eyes of anticipation and exchange thrills of laughter between one another. While the majority of students think of convocation as a formal tradition, there are always some that break the norm. One single scan over the audience gives you the sight of girls dressed in purple and gold choir robes, and boys wearing clown wigs, sunglasses, and sequined sweater-vests. Entering next are the faculty and staff, who bring back memories of classes on the chapel lawn and research projects made possible only by John Holberg. President Nielson greets the incoming freshmen with applause as he asks them to stand. Altogether, it was the beginning of a really, really good year.

Spring Semester started out on the chilly side this year. Chaplain Messner rushed to the pulpit at the closing of chapel to announce the cancellation of all classes from that point on. Laughter and joy erupted in that small chapel. Not long after that announcement, footprints and snowmen could be found in the different nooks and crannies around campus. And so started Covenant's love-hate relationship with the snow. It seemed as if each week brought with it another snow flurry…and another cancellation or delay. You all loved it. Snowball fights across the chapel lawn, decorative snow forts between Founders and Mac, cardboard box sleds, sleeping in well past 1 o'clock. You regularly hoped for additional snowfall to extend the mid-week hiatus from classes. The fun went along until you received the note from the higher-ups that reading days were now official days. Once again it was time to welcome spring with the multi-colored hammocks and strappy Chacos.

Welcome to Carter. Just inside you'll notice the cozy fireplace and dimmed mood lighting—both of which are the most notable contributions to this inviting, warm lobby. Whether you're strolling down Third Central or Fifth North, doors are always open: turning every hour into social hour and resulting in undoubtedly strong hall identities. Rumors of it being haunted keep Carter residents close-knit; however their blossoming community may also be due to their common bond of beauty, charisma, or athletic ability. You may notice remnants of Carter's hall pride around campus. Most notably may be the Ghetto insignia atop the waffle press in the Great Hall. A quick jog down Second Central will have you wondering if those boys were born wearing flannel. While Carter is known for its leaky sinks and low water pressure, these struggles are no real obstacle to maintaining and strengthening the strong culture of trust and community in this building.

If we were to compare Founders to a wardrobe (similar to the one found in the Chronicles of Narnia), we would find the white skinny jeans and thick holiday sweaters hanging directly above a tattered pair of bright red TOMS. Similar to this wardrobe, Founders residents celebrate obscurity through their old time traditions. From Catacombs Toga Parties to Brethren robes (which may or may not have been washed recently), Founders does not disappoint. Caledon's Wax Museum and Jungle's search for First Belz were by and large the greater contributions to Founder's Skit Night this year. Founders means family. And while family members often get on your nerves, we think you'll hear less of the arguments and more of the dance parties and music in Founders.

Up until now, Mac has been noted for its studious residents. But on top of being lethally intelligent, Mac residents have shown their true colors this year. Lawrence boys entertained us all with their 'Scan and Skip' plot at Mac Movie Night, and The Five Points took Macstock one step further with their Diego adventure through the trees and dirt. The girls learned to embrace and protect each other during a dirty game of assassins. The 'Chialcyon' and 'Rowambe' allegiances were strengthened and especially bonded because of this. Whether you find yourself in Mac just between classes or fighting for a primo spot in the Caudle room, realize that regardless of your presuppositions, Mac has been pretty well rounded this year.

The jury is still out. No one has been able to decide if this building is pronounced "AN-dree-us" or "Ahn-DRAY-uhs". While you toil over that discrepancy, take a moment to acknowledge the customs that have been successfully instituted by this building. The girls' halls have hosted numerous progressive dinners. These typically begin on the first floor with appetizers and finish atop the veranda for dessert and a dance party. This year, Operation 4:19 was started in order to get Andreas residents into the community to volunteer—something unique to this building alone. Each hall went into the city of Chattanooga on a Saturday morning to serve and returned to campus in the late afternoon to recap their varying experiences. As far as we can tell, Andreas is well on its way to establishing many long-term traditions, both on campus and in the community.

STUDENT LIFE

You. In thirty years. Not only will you have a mess of children running around your house, but you will have in-laws, pets, and taxes. And what you'll really need is a moment to romanticize about your years here at Covenant. Just wait, you'll see. Among the most memorable times was when you played dress-up as plane crash victims and flight attendants, gorillas, mermen, pirates, and buried treasure for Kastaway Kilter. Mistletoe Mingle gave you the opportunity to get up close and personal with Santa Claus himself. As usual, Spring Formal was classy, but what truly embodied this was the original music and poetry about Lil' Wayne that you contributed to Catacombs Folk Festival. Even more memorable than that were the get-ups you wore to Battle Ball. So take it easy. Even though one of the greatest years has passed and is documented in these next few pages, you've probably still got some good memories and laughs ahead. We promise.

ATHLETICS

Winning wasn't always in the cards for us, but that had no effect on the effort and enthusiasm you brought with you to the sidelines. Drive miles and miles to combat Bryan College and screaming yourself hoarse are only two of the proofs we have of this. There were many battle cries echoed across Covenant's athletic fields and courts this year.

Faces were painted and the Scottish flag was prominently displayed on bare chests at basketball, soccer, and volleyball games as a mark of our Scots pride. Louder, and louder, and louder we scream… "We are the Scots, we come from the mountain!"

32,257 photos have been taken of you, the Covenant College community, for use in this book. The photos featured here are but a brief glimpse of what has happened throughout the school year. We hope that this book reflects the best of the best. One of our goals this year was to show individual personality in light of the identity of the larger community. Even more, we wanted to faithfully represent the class and quality that this institution commands. In order to achieve these goals, Tartan meetings were ushered in with eruptions of laughter in our cozy office, Jackson 108. These goals have percolated into every aspect of our work. Kaia sought to guide and nurture creativity while supplying a never ending river of coffee in the office. Zach sat patiently at a cold, metal desk while working on the ebb and flow of page layouts (and simultaneously watching multiple seasons of Law & Order). Garrett invaded your personal space by capturing your smiles, costumes, and props for individual photos. Clara wrote to preserve some of the memories that escape our own minds over time. And Kimberly, our personal "whatever" girl, spent hours emailing, calling, and sending smoke signals in order to keep our staff on task and in clear communication. But this book isn't about the hours we spent in meetings, the threads of emails filled with to-do lists, or the all-nighters pulled to make this book possible. This book is about you--this year. More than any of that, our staff hopes that you find this book timeless.

Special thanks to Warren-McLelland, Student Senate and Jen Allen. And to Shannon, our publisher.
